ISO CLASSIFICATION

BSFD has been given an Insurance Services Office (ISO) Class 5/9, which means that homes located in-district, within 5 road miles of either of the above stations and having fire hydrants in their subdivision have a Class 5 rating for property insurance underwriting purposes (Note that fire department fill sites placed to comply with BSF District/Gallatin County requirements do not count as fire hydrants for ISO purposes. This is controlled by the ISO, not BSFD, as they are the third-party evaluators hired by insurance companies for fire protection classification purposes.).

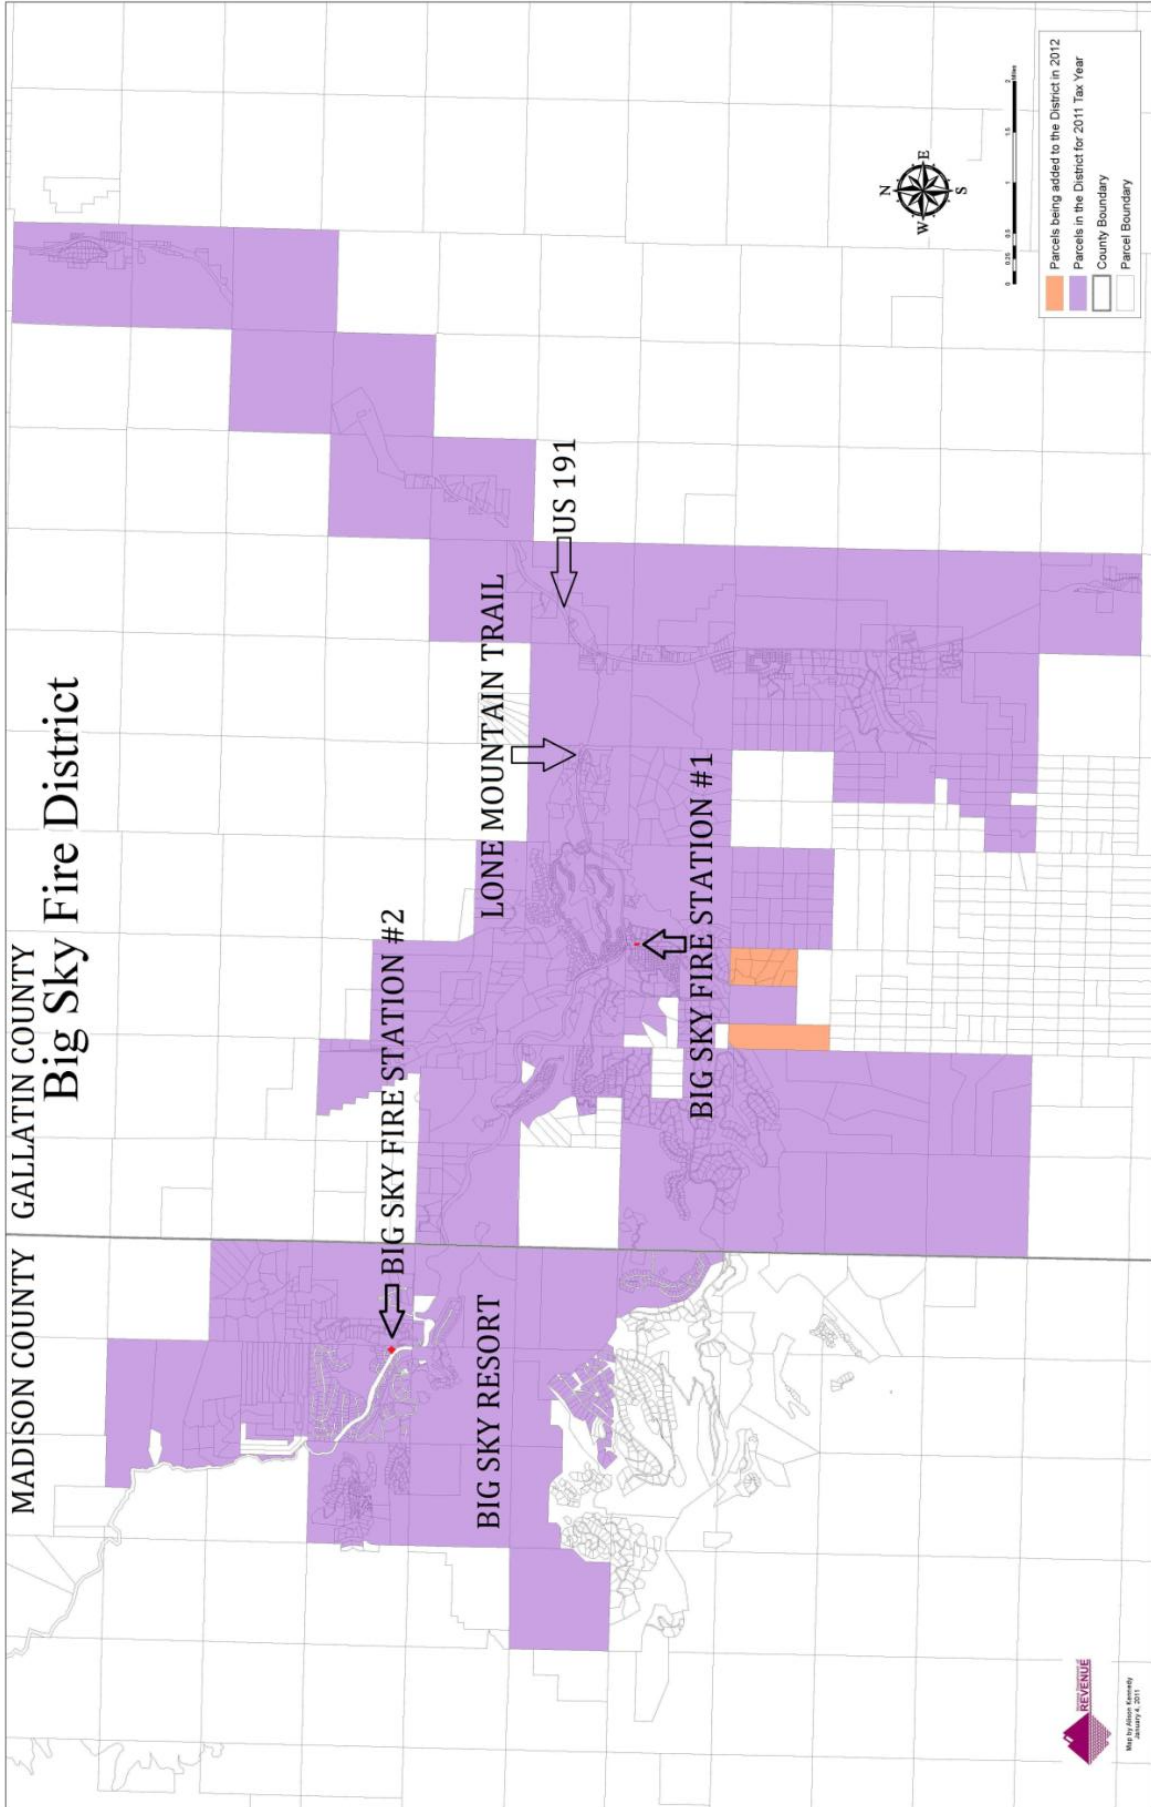

Portions of the Big Sky area have water supplies and hydrants that are maintained by the Big Sky Water and Sewer District (406-995-2660). Questions regarding hydrant locations and their capacities can be directed to them. Many homeowner associations (HOAs) also maintain their own private water systems with hydrants. Specific information regarding them should be directed to the HOA (there are over 100 HOAs in Big Sky so that information is site specific).

In-District subdivisions/properties beyond 5 miles or those within 5 miles that do not have fire hydrants have a Class 9 rating.

Out-of-district properties have a Class 10 rating (no recognized fire protection) as they are not within the district boundaries and have no fire service protection (see next section).

A rough map of the BSF District is shown on the next page. A map of the BSF District can be viewed at the Gallatin County GIS website (http://gis.gallatin.mt.gov/general_viewer/), but it does not include the Madison County areas.

Note – map not to scale and is only meant to be a rough representation of the district’s boundaries.

PROPERTIES COVERED BY BSFD

While many properties and subdivisions in the Big Sky area have met BSF District requirements and sought annexation into the District, there remain a number of properties that are not in-district. Only properties that pay BSF District property taxes are in-district. Current BSF District policy allows for emergency responses out-of-district but this will only be done if BSFD resources are available and the District will not guarantee that a response will be made. Responses made out-of-district may be subject to having to pay BSFD for services rendered.
